

The Whole Story in a Line.

THE WORLD'S Real Estate Index possesses every feature that is essential to an efficient and successful advertising.

NOVELTY.
ARRANGEMENT.
CLEARNESS.
COMPLETENESS.
CHEAPNESS.
AND THE MOST IMPORTANT OF THESE IS CHEAPNESS.

PRICE ONE CENT.

THE REAL ESTATE INDEX TELLS THE WHOLE STORY.

LAST EDITION. DRAYTON TALK.

Closeted To-day With His Lawyer Preparing a Statement for the Public.

He Was Taken Off the Majestic by Dr. Jenkins and Slept at a Friend's House.

Mr. Borrower Lands and Promises to Reply to Any Statement Drayton May Make Public.

The Stories About Mrs. Drayton, He Says, Are Cruel and Malicious Lies.

The only passenger of the steamship Majestic who was permitted to leave the ship before she arrived at her dock, at the foot of West Tenth street, this morning was J.
Coleman Drayton, one of the principals in the Drayton-Borrower scandal, which it had been feared would result in deadly combat in mid-air.

Although neither the collector of the Port nor anyone else in authority appears to have granted permission to Mr. Drayton to leave the vessel, some friends asserted that he was ashore before the Majestic left Quarantine, and he has since kept himself in the city secret hiding.

Whether he remained on Staten Island overnight, or came to New York and accepted the hospitality of friends here, or went on to Philadelphia, as some of his friends asserted he intended to do, could not be ascertained.

Those who had caught a glimpse of him on the Majestic as he came to anchor at Quarantine found him very uncommunicative at that time; but although he refused them to talk of his difficulties with Mr.
Borrower, he was friendly and courteous in challenge to a duel had stirred up on both sides of the Atlantic, he promised to several persons that he would meet them later in the evening—about 9 o'clock, he said—at the Windsor Hotel in this city, and make a full statement of his side of the case and answer all proper questions.

When 9 o'clock came Mr. Drayton had not put in an appearance at the Windsor, although a large delegation of friends and reporters was on hand to welcome him, and besides, he sent no explanation of his failure to keep his engagement.

WORLD SKEW SATISFACTION HERE.
Drayton's friend, Mr. G. E. Upshur, who spoke for him on board the Majestic, said that it was Mr. Drayton's intention to make a public reply to the Borrower version of the scandal through the newspapers.

Mr. Drayton, he said, would remain with his friends in New York for several days, at least, and would stop at the Union Club.
"He will have a settlement of this affair before he goes away from New York," said Mr. Upshur, confidently and positively. This was after Mr. Upshur had held a lengthy conversation with Mr. Drayton after the Majestic had arrived at Quarantine.

At the Union Club this morning inquires for Mr. Drayton met with this response:
"He is not here and we do not know where he is coming here or not. He has sent no word and no room has been engaged for him."

THE FIFTH AVENUE HOME CLOSED.
The house at 374 Fifth avenue, where Mr. and Mrs. Jack Astor have been living since the Drayton went abroad, is now closed, as the Astors are in Florida. The housekeeper said that an Evening World reporter who called there this morning:

"Mr. Drayton will not come here. I don't expect him. This house belongs to Mrs.
Drayton and not to Mr. Drayton."

Next door, No. 372, where the Roosevelts, who are connected with the Astors, live, it was said that nothing was known of Mr. Colman Drayton's whereabouts. He certainly would not come here, it was declared.

Mrs. Orme Wilson, a sister of Mr. Drayton, lives at 414 Fifth avenue, and it had been suggested that Mr. Drayton might have gone there. It was said, though, at the house that nothing was known of Mr. Drayton's movements.

In fact, it seemed very improbable that Mr.
Drayton would ever see the hospitality of any of the friends or relatives of the Astore family after the scandal which has been set on foot by his challenge to Hallett Borrower.

No one at the Windsor hotel had seen or heard anything from Mr. Drayton or his friends this morning.

"We saw it stated in some of the papers," said the clerk at the Windsor, "that Mr.
Drayton was coming here, but it must have been a mistake. He is probably being entertained at the house of some friend."

It was found out later that Mr. Drayton came up from Quarantine last night and went at once to the Benedict in Washington Square and thence, after midnight, went to the residence of Dr. Richard H. Derby, 3 East Fortieth street.

He slept at Dr. Derby's house, and this morning went to the office of his lawyer, Stephen P. Nash, 67 Wall street, where a long consultation was held regarding the public statement which should be made by Mr.
Drayton.

At lawyer Nash's office at noon to-day all information was refused. Mr. Nash would neither affirm nor deny that Mr. Drayton had been in consultation with him, or that he had even visited the office in the building.

A gentleman who has an office in the building, however, declares that he knows that Mr. Drayton was there.

HOW DRAYTON WAS TAKEN OFF THE SHIP.
The Majestic was shrouded in fog at her dock at 6:30 o'clock this morning. A few moments later her passengers began to come down the gang-plank.

Mr. Drayton was not among the passengers who were scurrying hither and thither in eagerness to quit the ship after their enforced detention in the fog bank of yesterday. He had been taken from the ship late yesterday afternoon at Quarantine by Health Officer Jenkins after the latter had landed the reporters who boarded the Majestic.

The Evening World reporter visited Mr.
Drayton's stateroom, No. 29, on the starboard side of the Majestic, a few minutes after she made fast to the dock, and found it absolutely empty.

All Mr. Drayton's effects had been transferred to the pier within ten minutes from the time the Majestic was made fast, and his man Packer was there standing guard, a silent sentinel over the twenty odd pieces of leather-covered long boxes and well-filled trunks, bags, and the like.

Packer refused to say a word as to his master's whereabouts, or whether the baggage would be carried.

A knock at stateroom 34 on the port side of the Majestic, Mr. Drayton's, called forth the response, in a decidedly English accent, "We're not quite ready yet, me man."

MR. BORROWER COMES ALONG.
Soon after a tall man, of splendid physique, carrying a carved handbag cane upon which he leaned heavily, slipped out of stateroom 34.

"Is this Mr. Milbank?" inquired THE EVEN-ING WORLD reporter.

"It is. What can I do for you?" asked the young Englishman, whose fame as a duellist preceded him to these shores.

"I wish to see Mr. Borrower."

"He's right inside."

At that moment the stateroom door was thrown open and Mr. Borrower was seen sitting on the edge of the lower berth. He is an under-sized man, looking to be not more than thirty years old and of dark complexion.

He wore a black derby hat of full crown, with considerable roll to the brim. A sack suit of soft-colored mixed material enveloped his well-knit form, and a high standing collar enriched his throat.

A pink-barred shirt was a noticeable feature of his make-up, and his trousers were rolled up at the bottom very considerably.

Mr. Borrower's face is smooth, except for a slight growth of black whiskers running down below each ear.

MR. DRAYTON TO MAKE A STATEMENT.
He roared nonchalantly with a cigarette, and when a reporter asked what statement he desired to make he elevated his eyebrows and after a moment's hesitation replied:

"None just at present. I have yet to consult with my friends. Later in the day I will probably have something to communicate to the press."

"But Mr. Drayton has already said to the press that he declared you to be a cur and a coward," said the reporter. "Do you not consider that that calls for an immediate reply?"

"Oh! has he, indeed?" and Mr. Borrower smiled amiably.

For many days of betraying the secrecy in the affair by giving the correspondence to the press.

"That is not true. I did nothing at all in the matter of publishing that correspondence."

"The world at large condemns you, Mr.
Borrower, for he believes you violated all honorable precedents in your position in this affair," ventured the reporter.

MR. BORROWER'S INCOGNITO.
"I have steadily denied every allegation that there was ever a liaison between the lady and myself, and I deny it again now. But I must decline to talk further on this point. Come to me later at my house."

"Did you have any trouble whatever with Mr. Drayton on the passage over?"

"Not the slightest. We never spoke to each other."

"Do you know where Mr. Drayton went when he left the boat last night?"

"I haven't the faintest idea. I was simply told that he left the ship last night."

"Do you expect to have a meeting in this country or anywhere else?"

"Oh! I shall, perhaps," he said as he stood up and walked toward the stateroom. "But pray excuse me. I'll make a statement later."

MR. MILBANK TALKS OF HIMSELF.
Mr. Milbank returned at this point, and as the reporter started to interrogate him Mr.
Borrower interrupted, saying: "You can also talk with Mr. Milbank at the same time."

Mr. Milbank volunteered to talk a little about himself, however. He was clad in a dark brown mixed sack suit, and his shapely head was topped by a black derby, similar to that worn by Mr. Borrower.

A small light-brown moustache droops gracefully over his lip. He has brown eyes and a clear complexion, and is altogether a good-looking young man.

"This is the second time I've been in America," he said. "The last time I was over I remained but two days, and he laughed heartily, showing a well-kept set of teeth.

"By all that," he continued, "if I had accepted all the invitations I received I should have to have eaten seventy-five dinners and drank a thousand cocktails. I have a great many friends here."

DRIVEN TO MR. BORROWER'S HOME.
Mr. Borrower and Mr. Milbank left the ship at 7:45, and after directing the disposal of their luggage, engaged a cab and ordered the driver to take them to Mr. Borrower's house, 23 West Seventeenth street.

DR. JENKINS TO BE INVESTIGATED.
The landing of Mr. Drayton by Health Officer Jenkins at Quarantine without the sanction of the Collector, has caused a great deal of comment to the customs officials.

One of the deputy inspectors said that an investigation would be made in the matter, as it was clearly a violation of the United States Customs laws, and there is a penalty of $1,000 for such violation.

It is said that one reason why the Majestic did not reach her dock last night was that she ran aground on oyster Island, which lies behind, southwesterly, of Bedloe's Island.

The heavy fog was responsible for the Majestic's steaming out of her course in the inner harbor.

REDDY GARDNER ON THE LOOKOUT.
Short after 9 o'clock this morning Fred Gardner drove to the White Star pier alone.
He had hunted the place all day yesterday in company with Vercy Drayton, a cousin of J. Coleman Drayton.

Mr. Gardner held an earnest consultation with Sgt. Tubbs, in charge of the cab service, and it is believed that he left orders where to have Mr. Drayton's baggage transported. Sgt. Tubbs refused to say anything, but at 1 o'clock this afternoon his team delivered Mr. Drayton's baggage at Mr. Derby's house, 3 East Fortieth street.

WILL THERE BE A MEETING?
From the published account of the correspondence between Messrs. Drayton and Borrower and their seconds in regard to the proposed combat in France it was to be inferred that the negotiations for a meeting were broken off on account of certain disclosures which were made by Mr. Borrower to his seconds with reference to his past relations with Mrs. Drayton.

The excuse given for terminating the correspondence was that in the opinion of Messrs. Milbank and Fox and of the authorities upon questions of honor who had been consulted by them, Mr. Drayton had known intimacy between his wife and Mr. Borrower for several years, and had in fact on one occasion surprised them in a compromising situation.

Mr. Borrower, in a statement which he made yesterday, denies most emphatically that he ever made such statements, and says that never has a word passed between himself and Mrs. Drayton that he would not be willing that his husband and the whole world should hear and know of.

"She is a very lovely woman," he says,
"whom I respect and esteem, and for whom I entertain the same feelings of respect and esteem that I entertain for any other woman of my acquaintance whom I have had the honor to meet in society."

"She has been subjected to a cruel insult. Her husband knows as well as any one that she is as guileless of wrong doing, wrong thought, wrong intent as a child."

MR. MILBANK'S SIGNED STATEMENT.
Mr. Borrower received a party of newspaper men at his father's house, 23 West Seventeenth street, at 12:15 p. m. to-day.

Mr. Milbank sat at a desk, with a written statement in his hand. "Mr. Milbank," said Mr. Borrower, "has prepared a statement regarding the correspondence in this affair, and that is all we have to say."

Mr. Milbank passed the statement to one of the reporters, who read aloud. Following is a full text of that document:

"Having heard a report that the publication of certain letters in this affair has been attributed to the action of H. A. Borrower, I wish most emphatically to state that both myself and Mr. Borrower were in utter ignorance that any such publication had taken place, and that any statement on the subject had been sent to any newspaper."

"We looked on the correspondence as sacred, and we can only condemn the breach of faith in whoever has seen fit to take such a step."

Any accusation of cowardice brought against Mr. H. A. Borrower must fall to the ground of itself, as every one who knows him must know how thoroughly without foundation is such accusation.

(Signed) HARRY VANCE MILBANK.

After the reading of the statement was concluded with Mr. Milbank said:

"There is one thing I want to mention. It has been said that Mr. Borrower sailed on the Majestic under the assumed name of Burrows. That it is not so. I wrote his correct name myself on the ship's register."

THAT JURY OF HONOR.

THE EVENING WORLD reporter said to Mr.
Borrower: "Mr. Drayton, in a letter included in the correspondence, uses this language:
'He has inflicted on me the most grievous injury of a lifetime by seducing my wife. There has been any inference drawn from that information that your relations with Mrs. Drayton had been just what you had denied that they were.'"

"I have no further statement to make,"
was Mr. Borrower's answer.

"Why was it necessary then to refer this matter to a Jury of Honor and cite a hypothetical case with an unknown woman figuring?"

"What's that? What's that?" broke in Mr.
Milbank hastily. Mr. Borrower put his hand against Mr. Milbank's chest as an admonition of silence, but he continued to do so, as if just what a Jury of Honor means in Paris."

"There are many questions arising," he said, "that necessitate a reference to a Jury of Honor, and the Due de Moray and M. Aurillac Scholl and M. Paul de Cassagne are recognized experts in affairs of this nature."

"But if there was no truth in the allegation of a liaison between Mrs. Drayton and Mr. Borrower, why was the hypothetical question raised implicating an unknown woman, and why did those eminent experts in such matters declare in their letters that Mr. Drayton had forfeited all claims to a duel because of a money consideration and the length of time which had elapsed since the liaison was said to have been discovered?"

THE UNEXPLAINED HYPOTHETICAL QUERY.
Mr. Milbank preserved silence, and Mr. Borrower, who appeared ill at ease, said:

"You gentlemen must be satisfied with the statement I have just handed to you. I cannot say anything further just
now. Perhaps I may at some future time.
I do not intend to leave New York, and I can be found at my home at any time. I have treated you fairly in this matter, please do as much for me."

"And you now reiterate your denial that there was ever any impropriety in your conduct with the lady in question?"

"I do most absolutely."

Jenkins Took Him Off the Steamer.

THE EVENING WORLD reporter visited Mr.
Jenkins at Quarantine without the sanction of the Collector, has caused a great deal of comment to the customs officials.

One of the deputy inspectors said that an investigation would be made in the matter, as
it was clearly a violation of the United States Customs laws, and there is a penalty of $1,000 for such violation.

It is said that one reason why the Majestic
did not reach her dock last night was that she
ran aground on oyster Island, which lies behind, southwesterly, of Bedloe's Island.

The heavy fog was responsible for the Ma-
jestic's steaming out of her course in the inner harbor.

REDDY GARDNER ON THE LOOKOUT.
Short after 9 o'clock this morning Fred
Gardner drove to the White Star pier alone.
He had hunted the place all day yesterday
in company with Vercy Drayton, a cousin of
J. Coleman Drayton.

Mr. Gardner held an earnest consultation with Sgt. Tubbs, in charge of the cab
service, and it is believed that he left orders
where to have Mr. Drayton's baggage transported. Sgt. Tubbs refused to say anything, but at 1 o'clock this afternoon his team delivered Mr. Drayton's baggage at Mr. Derby's house, 3 East Fortieth street.

WILL THERE BE A MEETING?
From the published account of the correspondence between Messrs. Drayton and Borrower and their seconds in regard to the proposed combat in France it was to be inferred
that the negotiations for a meeting were
broken off on account of certain disclosures
which were made by Mr. Borrower to his seconds with reference to his past relations with Mrs. Drayton.

The excuse given for terminating the correspondence was that in the opinion of Messrs. Milbank and Fox and of the authorities upon questions of honor who had been consulted by them, Mr. Drayton had known
intimacy between his wife and Mr. Borrower
for several years, and had in fact on one occasion surprised them in a compromising situation.

Mr. Borrower, in a statement which he made yesterday, denies most emphatically
that he ever made such statements, and says that never has a word passed between himself and Mrs. Drayton
that he would not be willing that his husband and the whole world should hear and
know of.

"She is a very lovely woman," he says,
"whom I respect and esteem, and for whom I entertain the same feelings of
respect and esteem that I entertain for
any other woman of my acquaintance whom
I have had the honor to meet in society."

"She has been subjected to a cruel insult. Her husband knows as well as any one that she is as guileless of wrong doing, wrong thought, wrong intent as a child."

MR. MILBANK'S SIGNED STATEMENT.
Mr. Borrower received a party of newspaper men at his father's house, 23 West Seventeenth street, at 12:15 p. m. to-day.

Mr. Milbank sat at a desk, with a written statement in his hand. "Mr. Milbank," said Mr. Borrower, "has prepared a statement regarding the correspondence in this affair, and that is all we have to say."

Mr. Milbank passed the statement to one of the reporters, who read aloud. Following is a full text of that document:

"Having heard a report that the publication of certain letters in this affair has been attributed to the action of H. A. Borrower, I wish most emphatically to state that both
myself and Mr. Borrower were in utter ignorance that any such publication had
taken place, and that any statement on the subject had been sent to any newspaper."

"We looked on the correspondence as
sacred, and we can only condemn the breach
of faith in whoever has seen fit to take
such a step."

Any accusation of cowardice brought
against Mr. H. A. Borrower must fall to the ground of itself, as every one who knows him
must know how thoroughly without foundation is such accusation.

(Signed) HARRY VANCE MILBANK.

After the reading of the statement was concluded with Mr. Milbank said:

"There is one thing I want to mention. It has been said that Mr. Borrower sailed on the Majestic under the assumed name of Burrows. That it is not so. I wrote his correct name myself on the ship's register."

THAT JURY OF HONOR.

THE EVENING WORLD reporter said to Mr.
Borrower: "Mr. Drayton, in a letter included
in the correspondence, uses this language:
'He has inflicted on me the most grievous injury of a lifetime by seducing my wife. There has been any inference drawn from that information that your relations with Mrs. Drayton had been just what you had denied that they were.'"

"I have no further statement to make,"
was Mr. Borrower's answer.

"Why was it necessary then to refer this matter to a Jury of Honor and cite a hypothetical case with an unknown woman figuring?"

"What's that? What's that?" broke in Mr.
Milbank hastily. Mr. Borrower put his hand against Mr. Milbank's chest as an admonition of silence, but he continued to do so, as if
just what a Jury of Honor means in Paris."

"There are many questions arising," he
said, "that necessitate a reference to a Jury
of Honor, and the Due de Moray and M. Aurillac Scholl and M. Paul de Cassagne are recognized experts in affairs of this nature."

"But if there was no truth in the allegation of a liaison between Mrs. Drayton and
Mr. Borrower, why was the hypothetical question raised implicating an unknown
woman, and why did those eminent experts in such matters declare in their letters that Mr. Drayton had forfeited all claims
to a duel because of a money consideration
and the length of time which had elapsed
since the liaison was said to have been discovered?"

THE UNEXPLAINED HYPOTHETICAL QUERY.
Mr. Milbank preserved silence, and Mr. Borrower, who appeared ill at ease, said:

"You gentlemen must be satisfied with the statement I have just handed to you. I cannot say anything further just
now. Perhaps I may at some future time.
I do not intend to leave New York, and I can be found at my home at any time. I have treated you fairly in this matter, please do
as much for me."

"And you now reiterate your denial that there was ever any impropriety in your conduct with the lady in question?"

"I do most absolutely."

Jenkins Took Him Off the Steamer.

THE EVENING WORLD reporter visited Mr.
Jenkins at Quarantine without the sanction of the Collector, has caused a great deal of comment to the customs officials.

One of the deputy inspectors said that an investigation would be made in the matter, as
it was clearly a violation of the United States Customs laws, and there is a penalty of $1,000 for such violation.

It is said that one reason why the Majestic
did not reach her dock last night was that she
ran aground on oyster Island, which lies behind, southwesterly, of Bedloe's Island.

The heavy fog was responsible for the Ma-
jestic's steaming out of her course in the inner harbor.

REDDY GARDNER ON THE LOOKOUT.
Short after 9 o'clock this morning Fred
Gardner drove to the White Star pier alone.
He had hunted the place all day yesterday
in company with Vercy Drayton, a cousin of
J. Coleman Drayton.

Mr. Gardner held an earnest consultation with Sgt. Tubbs, in charge of the cab
service, and it is believed that he left orders
where to have Mr. Drayton's baggage transported. Sgt. Tubbs refused to say anything, but at 1 o'clock this afternoon his team delivered Mr. Drayton's baggage at Mr. Derby's house, 3 East Fortieth street.

WILL THERE BE A MEETING?
From the published account of the correspondence between Messrs. Drayton and Borrower and their seconds in regard to the proposed combat in France it was to be inferred
that the negotiations for a meeting were
broken off on account of certain disclosures
which were made by Mr. Borrower to his seconds with reference to his past relations with Mrs. Drayton.

The excuse given for terminating the correspondence was that in the opinion of Messrs. Milbank and Fox and of the authorities upon questions of honor who had been consulted by them, Mr. Drayton had known
intimacy between his wife and Mr. Borrower
for several years, and had in fact on one occasion surprised them in a compromising situation.

Mr. Borrower, in a statement which he made yesterday, denies most emphatically
that he ever made such statements, and says that never has a word passed between himself and Mrs. Drayton
that he would not be willing that his husband and the whole world should hear and
know of.

"She is a very lovely woman," he says,
"whom I respect and esteem, and for whom I entertain the same feelings of
respect and esteem that I entertain for
any other woman of my acquaintance whom
I have had the honor to meet in society."

"She has been subjected to a cruel insult. Her husband knows as well as any one that she is as guileless of wrong doing, wrong thought, wrong intent as a child."

MR. MILBANK'S SIGNED STATEMENT.
Mr. Borrower received a party of newspaper men at his father's house, 23 West Seventeenth street, at 12:15 p. m. to-day.

Mr. Milbank sat at a desk, with a written statement in his hand. "Mr. Milbank," said Mr. Borrower, "has prepared a statement regarding the correspondence in this affair, and that is all we have to say."

Mr. Milbank passed the statement to one of the reporters, who read aloud. Following is a full text of that document:

"Having heard a report that the publication of certain letters in this affair has been attributed to the action of H. A. Borrower, I wish most emphatically to state that both
myself and Mr. Borrower were in utter ignorance that any such publication had
taken place, and that any statement on the subject had been sent to any newspaper."

"We looked on the correspondence as
sacred, and we can only condemn the breach
of faith in whoever has seen fit to take
such a step."

Any accusation of cowardice brought
against Mr. H. A. Borrower must fall to the ground of itself, as every one who knows him
must know how thoroughly without foundation is such accusation.

(Signed) HARRY VANCE MILBANK.

After the reading of the statement was concluded with Mr. Milbank said: